

good can come to the entire city. If sufficient business establishments can be interested in the matter, you may depend upon us for support, and we shall be glad to contribute either financially or in any other way to the realization of this very desirable enterprise.

From William G. Carter, first vice president, Golden & Co., commission merchants:

I herewith inclose application for membership in the Shippers' Association of Washington, and it will be a pleasure for me to assist, by any means in my power, the furthering of this good cause, which I recognize as highly important to the business men of the District of Columbia.

Chairman Bell's Statement.

Chairman Bell wishes it understood, as The Times explained yesterday, that this movement has no connection with manufacturing. Its whole purpose and extent is confined to the single plan to increase and diversify Washington's jobbing trade.

"There are many persons who do not believe that Washington should strive to become a manufacturing city," said Mr. Bell. "Indeed, I am one of them. This movement, however, is wholly different. We are not trying to get manufacturers. We neither oppose nor favor them. We have one single object—the increase of the jobbing trade—and we are sticking to that. We have no ulterior object concealed."

B. H. Warner, former president of the Board of Trade, said: "The Washington business men will do a good thing for the city if they can get a proper adjustment of railroad rates in favor of shipment to and from this city. Why should coal be taken past our doors from the soft coal fields and delivered in Philadelphia at a cheaper rate than we can acquire. Everyone who is a large consumer is interested in this feature of the case. Washington is a fine distributing point for the jobbing trade. Why are we behind Baltimore in all commercial and industrial movements? Why, because some one has not put capital and energy into business lines which have given that city great prestige and profit all through the South and West."

A Fine Waterway.

"We have a fine waterway to the sea which should keep down high rates to all important points North and South, and which will quickly aid in securing additional railway facilities a few hundred miles distant, and which have railway lines enough here—even if largely controlled by the Pennsylvania system—to give us low ratings. Let some of the modern energy and intelligence which we possess be centered in building up a jobbing point here, and good results must soon follow. Get the Board of Trade, Business Men's Association, and New Shippers' Association to join hands and do earnest work. You are proceeding along right lines. Go ahead and agitate."

Deserves All Support.

Heartily approval of the project was expressed this morning by Louis F. Shoemaker, who said it receives the support of all public spirited citizens of Washington.

"What this city needs most," said Mr. Shoemaker, "is an increased variety of business life, which will broaden the door of hope and opportunity and success to the young men of Washington. There is an impression abroad that Washington draws its whole sustenance from the National Government. It is not true, but it needs further and practical refutation. "I can see no reason why a jobbing business should not succeed here, although I do not speak from personal knowledge. Personally, I would welcome all the wholesale houses that could be established. It would give our men new chances, that they are now denied. The movement deserves success and the sympathy and co-operation of the public."

PRESIDENT BACK TO HIS REAL VACATION

Negro Sailor on Yacht "Sylph" Stabbed During Dance.

OYSTER BAY, N. Y., July 5.—President Roosevelt got down to his real vacation pace today and unless something unforeseen occurs will not appear again in the public eye for some time to come. Secretary Loeb left the village for Sagamore Hill at 10:30, taking with him a large portfolio filled with official matters.

After the President concluded his office work he had luncheon and went for a horseback ride with Mrs. Roosevelt and the boys along the Cove road.

Italian Stabs Sailor.

A thrill of excitement was furnished the villagers late last night by the slaying of a colored sailor belonging to the President's yacht, the Sylph, by an Italian. The negroes of the town were giving a dance in honor of the Fourth at Flett's Hall, corner of Main and South streets, right opposite the executive office.

A crowd of the young colored men were congregated at the entrance, shooting off fire crackers and blank cartridges. Five or six Italian laborers happened to pass by the corner and colored celebrators thought it would be great fun to throw bunches of crackers at the feet of the Italians.

In Critical Condition.

They put the idea into execution, and for a few minutes were convulsed with glee to "see the Dagoes dance." In the very middle of the scene one of the sons of Italy leaped into the crowd of colored men plunged a knife into the side of the dusky tar and ran away in the darkness leaving the weapon in the wound. Doctor Barnes and his assistants of the village, treated the wounded man and found that the Italian's knife had entered the sailor's body six inches below the heart. After his wound was dressed the injured man was taken aboard the Sylph, where he is said to be in a critical condition.
